Guest editorial by the Clevedon Association

Every year, Clevedon’s growth headlines tend to focus on the visible things - a new trail, a bigger parade, design plans for the village centre. The Clevedon Association’s newly released 2026 Annual Report is a reminder that most of what shapes a village happens well before anyone notices it. We’ve had a bumper year of wide-ranging work across the village, organised around seven focus areas:

Communications

Online, the Association refreshed its social media under new lead Ellen David, and we are rebuilding our website. In print, the Clevedon Roundup newsletter had a strong year, growing to 38–40 pages an issue. We are seeking new editorial co-ordinators as current coordinator Miranda prepares to step back in 2027.

Events and placemaking

Over the past year, events were a major focus for the Clevedon Association. The Art Trail got a redesigned look; the 2025 Santa Parade was the biggest yet, with 27 floats and 300+ participants; and a six-month Community Hub pilot at the District Centre, run with the Local Board and Clevedon Library, drew 206 library visitors in six weeks, 19 new members and after-school visits quadrupling. A new play space for youth on North Road was well received, and ANZAC day was well attended. The Association will attempt to fill the big shoes left by Gina Sanders when it takes over next year’s ANZAC commemorations.

Design and planning

On design and planning, the Association progressed long-term “village heart” work, advocating for undergrounding powerlines, a new pedestrian crossing, Plan Change 120 and flood markers. We produced a village planting palette to help residents and developers with their landscaping selections. And we launched a new Main Street aspiration project aimed at coordinating public and private stakeholders around the village centre. No single landowner or agency can build the heart of the village alone, so someone has to do the unglamorous work of getting everyone rowing in the same direction, and we are fortunate to have Angela Fulljames at the helm of this project.

Destination Clevedon

Destination Clevedon work included a Venue Guide, a new 19-site Heritage Trail launching formally this month, and activations like the Easter Buffalo Bob hunt which drew 393 entries.

Community resilience and safety

Community resilience saw real progress on emergency response, with an EPod supply container, six trained volunteers, and an approved evacuation centre, plus an expanding CCTV network linked to Police.

Networks of people

We ran a survey which found most members join to support the Association’s mission rather than for perks. A new youth project launched, led by Isabella Penrose, which started by asking young people directly what they want.

Governance

Three long-serving committee members - Josephine Elworthy, Victoria Richards and Mary Whitehouse - retired under a new ten-year service limit.

None of the above happens by accident. It’s the result of hard work by our volunteers. If you’d like to join the team and help lighten the load, please get in touch - email chair@clevedon.co.nz.

New leadership for Beachlands South

New leadership team takes over daily operation of Beachlands South development

Beachlands South Limited Partnership (BSLP) has appointed a new internal leadership team as earthworks progress at the Formosa site.

Ian Passau, formerly General Manager of Development at Arvida Group and Kiwi Property Group, has been named Chief Executive Officer. “This is a remarkable opportunity, and I look forward to working alongside the talented team, our stakeholders and the wider community to help realise the vision and potential of Beachlands South,” says Ian.

BSLP Board Chair David Kennedy says Ian has extensive experience across construction and property development, including retail, residential, mixed-use, retirement and land development, including Auckland International Airport and Foodstuffs North Island.

BSLP has also appointed a new Chief Operating Officer, Guy Milburn, who has previously held senior management roles at Lime Global and Ngāi Tahu Property.

Both Ian and Guy will take over management of the day-to-day construction project, replacing external manager Russell Property Group. Russell Property Group will remain involved at board level and as specialist advisors. Parties associated with Russell Property Group remain shareholders in BSLP, alongside the NZ Super Fund, Ngāi Tai ki Tāmaki and Hāpai.

Preliminary earthworks are underway to prepare the site, with no firm timeline given for construction start dates.

Beachlands South is one of New Zealand’s largest single-site urban developments, which has drawn mixed reaction from the Pōhutukawa Coast community.

Hopes for a new secondary school within the development remain high. David Kennedy says discussions with the Ministry of Education are still underway.

Engagement with the local community will also continue, he said. “They have been great at providing input to us and council throughout the process and we welcome their ongoing input and feedback.”

Nature’s Den on mission to trade piece of bark for van

A Brookby outdoor education centre is in the process of trading its way from a single piece of tree bark toward a 12-seater passenger van.

The challenge, run by Nature’s Den, was inspired by the well-known “one red paperclip” trading story, in which someone famously traded a single paperclip all the way up to a house. Nature’s Den needs a new van to transport children and equipment involved in its outdoor education programme, but rather than turn to traditional fundraising or finance that the organisation couldn’t afford, founder Alex Sherie decided to see how far a series of trades could go instead.

The challenge began with a piece of rimu bark taken from the Nature’s Den site itself.

“It felt like a pretty fitting place to start, something simple from nature, which hopefully eventually becomes a vehicle that helps us take more children out into nature,” says Alex.

The challenge has become something of an education lesson for its students.

“A huge part of what we do at Nature’s Den is helping children build confidence, resilience, problem-solving skills and the courage to give things a go,” says Alex. “I thought this trading challenge was an opportunity to actually demonstrate those things rather than just talk about them.”

Alex has led by example, contacting complete strangers, businesses and organisations, asking awkward questions, and being willing to hear “no” along the way.

“I want the kids to see that you don’t necessarily have to know exactly how you’re going to achieve something before you start. Sometimes you just have to take the first step, ask the question, keep putting yourself out there and not give up when things don’t work out.”

There is no set “ladder” of items planned in advance. Each trade depends on what people offer next. When weighing up whether an offer is worth taking, value isn’t the only factor; how easy an item is to trade on, how much interest it generates, and whether it opens the door to bigger opportunities all come into play.

The standout trade so far came just five days in, when a $150 bike was swapped for a camp experience certificate valued at $2,100. More recently, a horse float was traded for a wedding photography package, after the photographer (who happened to be looking for a horse float himself) came across the challenge and got in touch.

Nature’s Den still has a way to go before reaching a full-sized passenger van, but there’s no real failure point built into the challenge. If the goal is undershot, the team will simply keep trading, and any funds beyond what’s needed will go back into supporting Nature’s Den’s programmes for children.

Alex says the community response so far has been a mix of people reaching out with offers and the team actively chasing new opportunities.

Anyone with an item, service or business opportunity that could help move the challenge forward is encouraged to get in touch via Nature’s Den’s social media pages, where the trades and story are being shared.

Choir prepares for Christmas

After a well-received mid-winter concert for the community in August, the Pohutukawa Coast Choir has begun preparing for its Christmas performance at Fern Place. The event has quickly become an institution on the coast, drawing hundreds of attendees over the last couple of years.

The choir doesn’t just stick to carols. New songs for this year include “Fairytale of New York” and “It’s Beginning to Look a Lot Like Christmas.”

It’s an all-comers choir, with no audition required and no need to read music. If you sing in the shower, you’re good enough to join, says choir leader Rebecca Starr.

The choir meets at the Maraetai Bowling Club, 1 Te Pene Road, Maraetai, just next to the school, from 7.15–9pm every

Pōhutukawa Coast & Country PROPERTY GUIDE

2 Alexander Avenue, Maraetai

003 Open Home: Saturday and Sunday 2:00 - 2:30pm | Tender: Thursday 22nd October

HOLIDAY MODE When Omana Beach and boat ramp are this close, the coastal lifestyle becomes part of your everyday life. With plenty of space both inside and out, this substantial two-level weatherboard and concrete-block home was built with flexible family living in mind. Its concrete mid-floor adds to the home's reassuringly solid construction. The huge internal-access garage and generous off-street parking provide room for the extra vehicles, the boat and all the "must have" coastal toys. The main level features light-filled open-plan living and dining, while downstairs, an additional lounge and rumpus room provide valuable flexibility for teenagers, extended family, guests or working from home. The home has also benefited from recent enhancements, including a modernised bathroom, a new laundry, electric blinds, a heat pump, selected upgraded kitchen appliances and even a new roof on the house. Set on an approximately 812m² freehold corner site with a sunny northerly aspect. Comfortable and practical as it stands, the home also offers exciting scope to modernize and renovate to your own style over time and take even more advantage of its superb position and outlook.

2026 Elections - Candidate Profile

Each week the PC Times will put questions to local candidates* standing in this year's general election on 7 Nov 2026
*those standing in Papakura (for Clevedon and surrounds) and Botany (for the Pōhutukawa Coast) wards

Interview with Dr Anahila Kanongata’a-Suisuiki, Labour Party Candidate for the Papakura electorate.

The rural communities of Clevedon, Kawakawa Bay, Hūnua and Ardmore are quite different from urban Papakura. How will you make sure these communities get real attention from you as MP?

I know from serving Papakura as a Labour List MP from 2017 to 2023 that I cannot understand an electorate from an office.

My way of working has always been to go where people are – schools, businesses, churches, farms, community organisations and local events. That is how I build relationships and how I learn what really matters to people.

I also come from a culture where tauhi caring for and maintaining relationships is important to how I lead. For me, that means I don’t visit once and disappear. I return.

That is the commitment I would bring to Clevedon, Kawakawa Bay, Hūnua and Ardmore. I want to know the people who hold these communities together and build relationships with them, so when something needs attention we are not meeting each other for the first time.

Roading is a constant concern in this part of the electorate - winding, often-narrow rural roads with lots of quarry and fill site heavy vehicle traffic, and growing traffic pressure as development in Clevedon progresses. What would you do to improve rural road safety and maintenance out here?

I am already aware of some of these concerns.

Recently, a Clevedon resident contacted me about the serious traffic safety issues around Ardmore School. I went out to meet him and hear directly about what families experience at school drop-off and pick-up, including the pressure from increasing traffic and heavy trucks using the road.

I have since raised the issue with the Ministry of Education because there is a longstanding agreement relating to access and parking around the school. I am continuing to follow that up.

That is how I work. I prefer to go out, meet people where the issue is happening, understand it and then take it to the people who can do something about it.

The wider concerns about narrow rural roads, quarry and fill-site traffic and increasing development need the same attention. As MP, I would work with residents, Auckland Transport, Auckland Council, NZTA and the industries generating heavy-vehicle movements to identify where improvements are needed and who is responsible for delivering them.

Having served six years in Parliament, I know that sometimes getting something done requires persistence, knowing who needs to make the decision, asking the questions and continuing to follow it up.

As Clevedon and the surrounding communities grow, we need to plan the roads and infrastructure alongside that growth rather than trying to catch up afterwards.

Emergency services response times are a concern for residents in this part of the electorate - some rely heavily on volunteer services given the distance from larger urban stations. What’s your view on how well these communities are currently served, and what would you push for as MP?

I have a lot of respect for the people who volunteer to serve their communities. I see that same spirit of service across Papakura, locals stepping up because they care about their neighbours.

Before deciding what I would push for, I would sit down with the local volunteers and emergency services. They know where the pressure is. I would want to understand the response times, equipment, volunteer numbers and what population growth is going to mean for them.

Having worked at senior levels in the public sector and served six years in Parliament, I understand that good advocacy starts with evidence. My responsibility as MP would be to take what I hear locally to the agencies and Ministers responsible and follow it through.

For me, this is also about caring. If volunteers are looking after our communities, we also need to look after and support the people doing that work.

Given how spread out this end of the electorate is, how do you plan to stay visible and accessible to residents in Clevedon, Kawakawa Bay, Hūnua and Ardmore - will you commit to regular visits or local meetings in these communities, rather than expecting people to come to you in Papakura?

Yes and people can hold me accountable for that.

I don’t believe representation happens only through an electorate office. I go to where people are.

Recently, when a Clevedon resident contacted me about the Ardmore School road-safety issue, I went out to meet him. I didn’t expect him to come to Papakura. That is a small example, but it shows how I work.

Whether it is at a school, marae, café, business, church, farm, market or community event, I learn much more by sitting with people and having a conversation.

I would establish regular opportunities to meet people locally in Clevedon, Kawakawa Bay, Hūnua and Ardmore.

If I represent you, part of my responsibility is to come to you, listen and then return.

This area of the electorate is not served by public transport - what steps would you take to convince Auckland Transport to fund a bus service in the area?

Public transport is about access to work, education, healthcare and family.

Labour has committed to a $20 weekly cap on public transport fares in Auckland. I support that because transport costs are part of the cost-of-living pressure families face.

But there is an obvious issue for people living here: a cheaper fare does not help if you don’t have a service to use.

I would work with residents to build the evidence for better connections. Where do people need to go? How many people would use a service? Could it connect into Papakura and the wider transport network? What kind of service would work for a rural community?

My experience in Parliament taught me how to take a community concern into the places where decisions are made. The legislation I sponsored protecting essential items belonging to people with disabilities began with a practical issue affecting people’s everyday lives. I worked across political parties and it eventually passed unanimously and became law.

I cannot personally order Auckland Transport to put on a bus. What I can do is make sure these communities have someone who knows how to take their case to the decision-making table and keep it there.

The need for a secondary school in the area has been on the Ministry of Education’s radar for some time now, and they have acknowledged that population growth from Clevedon and Beachlands will trigger the need for a school. However no steps have yet been taken to acquire the necessary land for a school. What are your views on this issue, and what would you do to drive the decision-making necessary to secure a school for the area?

I know this issue well because I have advocated alongside this community for a secondary school before.

In 2021, while I was a Labour List MP based in Papakura, I received and presented to Parliament the petition led by Beachlands resident Angela Mason, supported by around 3,600 people, calling for a secondary school for the Pōhutukawa Coast.

I also raised the issue with the Minister and Associate Minister of Education. The Ministry subsequently looked at the need for a secondary school and acknowledged that future population growth in Beachlands and Clevedon could trigger the need for one.

Five years later, that secondary school has still not been built.

So for me, this is not an issue that has appeared during an election campaign. I have walked part of this journey with the community already.

If the Ministry knows the population growth is coming, my question now is:

when will the land be secured?

As MP, I would go back to the Ministry and ask what has changed since its earlier assessment, what the current student projections are, what work has been done to identify a site and what decision is required to secure the land.

Education has been part of my work for more than a decade. Since 2014, I have worked alongside secondary school students through the leadership programme I developed. I have watched young people grow in confidence, go on to university and employment and become leaders themselves.

We know these communities are growing. We know more children are coming.

We should be planning for their school now.

Why should Papakura voters choose you specifically, and what do you bring to the role that sets you apart from the other candidates standing?

People have a choice and I respect that.

What I ask Papakura voters to look at is what I have done with the opportunities I have already been given to serve.

I served six years in Parliament, including as a Labour List MP based in Papakura. I have held senior leadership roles in the public sector. I am a Justice of the Peace, I run my own business and for more than a decade I have worked alongside young people through the leadership programme I developed.

In Parliament, I took an issue affecting people with disabilities, worked across political parties and turned it into legislation that passed unanimously and became law.

As Chair of Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians for the Pacific region, I worked with parliamentarians across 11 countries and contributed to change within the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

Those experiences taught me how to work with people, including people who may not agree with me, and how to move an issue from a conversation to action.

I have also changed since I was last in Parliament. I completed my Master of Education with First Class Honours, started my own business and continued working alongside young people. Those experiences have added to what I can bring to public service.

At this stage of my life, I think a lot about legacy.

I am a mother and grandmother. I want our children and grandchildren to inherit communities where people care for each other, young people have opportunities, businesses can succeed and people know their voice matters.

I have experience. I know how the government works. But most importantly, I know that representation begins with people. I am asking Papakura to give me the opportunity to work for them again.

FOOD AND ENTERTAINMENT

Easy and healthy kumara and feta waffles

You can pick up cheap waffle makers at any of the big retailers, and use them to make healthy meals great for any time of the day!

Serves 1

Ingredients

- 1 medium sized orange kumara
- 30g feta, crumbled
- 1 egg

Method

1. Heat the waffle maker and give it a quick spray with cooking spray.
2. Cook the kumara in the microwave for about 7 minutes until tender. Once cool enough to handle, peel off the skin, chop roughly, add to a bowl and mash with a fork.
3. Add the feta and egg, and combine well. Season with salt and pepper if desired.
4. Divide the mix in two and add half to each waffle pan. Cook until nicely golden.
5. Decorate with your choice of toppings such as beetroot hummous and pumpkin seeds, or banana and maple syrup.
6. Enjoy!

Play around with different variations, such as using potato instead of kumara, and mozzarella instead of feta.

BARFOOT THOMPSON

Student Voice

LOCAL STUDENTS' NEWS, VIEWS & LITERARY TALENT

This column features news, views and literary talents of students from Beachlands, Maraetai, Clevedon, Brookby, Hunua, Paparimu, Orere and Ardmore Schools.

One student featured each week will be presented with a certificate and a $20 book voucher, thanks to Barfoot & Thompson's Beachlands and Whitford branches.

Have you ever walked into a room and felt invisible, almost like you don't belong? I would like to share why all schools should celebrate every culture and why everyone deserves to have a sense of belonging. Firstly when students feel like they belong they will feel like there is a safety net around them. Secondly, feeling like you belong prevents severe loneliness and anxiety. Lastly, it is a good way for peers to connect and share about where they come from. When students feel like they belong, they are more likely to take mental risks like making mistakes, asking questions and sharing ideas with their classmates and buddies or even do something scary like when I was playing cricket with my class I didn't want bat the ball because I was scared but I had a lot of classmates and teachers supporting me to do something scary.

It prevents severe loneliness and anxiety. Joining different groups is a great way to make connections. I belong to Enviro and Kapa haka. It has helped me to talk to other kids that I wouldn't normally.

Sharing with our peers about where we come from can give you the opportunity to learn about other people's cultures. At the start of the year, we spent some time making culture boards. We included what food we eat there, famous landmarks and traditions that represent our culture. It was fun seeing and learning about other students cultures. Something I learnt was that my national dish is chicken tika masala from England.

Everyone deserves to feel like they belong . So next time there is an opportunity to join a group or make new friends please do.

- by Daisy Prince, Year 5, Ardmore School
